LEARN TO DO.
DO TO LEARN.

Founded in 2015, DePaul University's Master of Arts in Critical Ethnic Studies—the only one of its kind in the nation—examines the systematic marginalization of racial minorities in the urban United States and the global implication of these structures. The program takes an interdisciplinary and intersectional approach in which students take courses and work with nationally recognized faculty members across DePaul, including the African and Black Diaspora, Global Asian, International, Latin American and Latino/a, and Women's and Gender studies programs.
